To-day the Fremont men meet in Convention at Cleveland. Our advices show that the delegates are arriving in great numbers.

We have word that the desire for peace is rapidly increasing in Washington. So it is everywhere.

Our morning dispatches bring us very little of interest to-day, save the suggestion that great news may be hourly expected.

We learn that Banks is to be made military Governor of Louisiana as a reward for his military disaster. He deserves to lose his head.

The cost of prosecuting the war is now wastly greater than ever. The loss of blood and treasure is absolutely appalling, and if not speedily checked, the antion must soon sink in utter exhaustion.

It is suggested that if Grant takes Richmond, the 'Government' will sigree to recognize the independence of the Confederacy, reserving Virginia, and the rest of the Border States.

Deprectation of Paper, and its Consequences.

"It is a great mistake to teach that patriot ism requires men to receive and believe at the good news, and reject and believe all the bad news. The constant and repeated errors of this war have been in encouraging the people in the weakness of the enemy, and the ease with which he was to be disposed of The radical papers have been very fund of stigmatizing bad news as copperhend news, and thus conveying the impression that to doubt our complete success at any and all times indicates the political character of the doubter It ought not to be necessary to slow the wrong of this, and the vast injury it has done to the cause. It is infinitely better to less to the cause. It is infinitely better to less had results and hear good news, than to expect good results and hear bad news. We should always be taught to guard against the its the elevation of Greenan revolutionists to worst contingency.
